Excerpt: .and dreaming of plunder, Till this terrible war-whoop did rouse him like thunder. He started--and muttered, while Jowler gave tongue, I've often been roused thus, the day is but young; 111 scale this high fence, and again take tire field; If I be overtaken, I'll die ere I yield.' Resolved--gave a spring--took the way he thought best, Pop, pop, went the pease, as if at a crowds nest; An eye more discerning soon gave him the twitch, But fifty yards more and he dropt in the ditch Reynard's Last Speech. Don't think, like a ruffian, I'm here to declare f'oul deeds, or to say to you, watch and beware; Of actions' immoral, I ne'er knew the name, And cunning will ever redound to my fame. Should the place of my birth be the subject of quarrel, Unto all be it known, I belong to Riscarrel; Inured to fatigue, and accustomed...
