Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Preterm birth is defined as delivery before the completion of the 37th week of gestation, and it affects 13 of live births in the U. S. According to the 2010 National Vital Statistics report, there were 542, 893 preterm births in the U. S. in 2006. Rates of preterm birth result in a significant disease burden to the health care system. Although overall rates of neonatal mortality continue to decline, infants born too early are at risk for long-term morbidity. Tocolytics are drugs used to delay or inhibit contractions during the labor process. Several tocolytics are available to prevent preterm birth. These agents may be administered as primary therapy to control acute episodes of preterm labor or as maintenance therapy to prevent subsequent episodes. Maintenance tocolysis is usually provided for prolonged periods beyond 48 to 72 hours after arrest of acute preterm labor to inhibit the process of parturition until full term. While several studies have examined these agents for the control of acute episodes of preterm labor, the evidence to support their safety and efficacy as maintenance therapy is limited. Despite previous systematic reviews, uncertainty surrounding the use of terbutaline and other tocolytics as maintenance therapy to prevent recurrent episodes of preterm labor still exists. Given the importance and associated uncertainty about the appropriateness of ongoing use of the terbutaline pump for maintenance tocolysis for clinicians, patients, and policymakers, a review about the effectiveness and safety of SQ terbutaline pump was commissioned by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ) to address six Key Questions. This evidence report will add to previous systematic reviews by performing an up-to-date search of the literature, synthesizing evidence in the...
