Brand New Book  Print on Demand .JOB-SHADOWING DANIEL: WALKING THE TALK AT WORKby Larry Peabody The Sunday-Monday gap can make it seem as if everyday work has little or no spiritual significance. As a result, countless working Christians lead split-level lives, unable to do their daily work wholeheartedly. Any work for God, they suspect, must be done in off-hours or on the weekends. But as this book shows, Daniel's job in the work world says otherwise-making him an ideal candidate for job-shadowing, for mentoring contemporary working Christians. Most remember Daniel for the few hours he spent in the lions den. Yet his career spanned some 70 years throughout which he continually served God and people. Although Daniel lived more than 2,500 years ago, his work caused him to confront many of the same lions that intimidate contemporary Christians in the work world. He served God while on a non-religious payroll. The co-workers surrounding him included more unbelievers than believers. He worked in Babylon, a term that speaks of ambition, confusion, and self-centeredness. And his faith sometimes made him the target of strong...
