The princess was already in correspondence with some of her relatives at Coburg, but neither of the cousins there had yet visited London, and the dear old grandmother, the Dowager- duchess of Coburg, was no more to look upon the face of the little May-flower whom she loved so well. She had written to the Duchess of Kent on the princess s eleventh birthday: My blessings and good wishes for the day which gave you the sweet blossom of May! May God preserve and protect the valuable life of that lovely flower from all danger that will beset her mind and heart! The rays of the sun are scorching at the height to which she may one day attain. It is only by...
